

Forbes Magazine_ 10.9.20

1) "How to scale down your Thanksgiving for a smaller, more intimate dinner (perhaps just you and your significant other)"

- Thanksgiving will have smaller gatherings due to the pandemic. To still celebrate in style just one on one
 - Be sure not to skimp on the meal even if its for 2! Plan the full day from creating a holiday playlist, cozy clothing to your favorite family recipes including all the sides and desserts. Create a custom cocktail and set the table like you have 100 guests attending.
 - Be sure to set up times to call or virtually connect with loved ones. Send them a note in the mail expressing why you are thankful for them with the time of the Thanksgiving meet up online.

2) "How to plan a virtual Thanksgiving"

- Decide who will be on your “virtual guest list”
- Send all guests a festive “e-vite” with the time of day, theme and attire that you will be celebrating with them. For example ...
 - Watch the Macy’s parade with your nieces and nephews over hot cider and muffins – send them a box in the mail a week prior consisting of a muffin recipe and turkeys’ hats that you can color together.
 - Mid-morning ... Challenge your friends in other cities to participate in their local 5k turkey trot, invite them to zoom after to see who won!
 - Set up a table décor competition with your besties to see how everyone’s creative tablescape turned out, you may have ideas for next year!
 - Toast with your family with pre-Thanksgiving meal cocktails and see what everyone’s menu looks like ... send them your favorite bourbon or bubbles concoction on beautiful stationery with festive glassware
 - Game time & dessert with friends ... send them the game of choice, rules and dice or cards to playing and of course eat your pie together!
 - Do an online “Secret Santa” with your immediate family to see who is gifting for who come Christmas time